Busti Formaggi

BUSTI
FAUGLIA PISA ITALIA

Most of us think of pecorino as a cooking cheese, usually melted down to make a salty and decadent sauce as opposed to a table cheese. Truth be told, it was not my first go to when putting together boards either until I had a chance to try Busti's beautiful line of sheep's milk cheeses.

When you taste these Tuscan cheeses, you can taste the careful attention to detail and strong commitment to tradition in every bite. Not only does this line include a traditional Toscano DOP, but they also include many unique flavored options like pistachio, pesto or even rubbed with tomato paste which make not only for beautiful boards but a fun cacio e pepe with a twist! Spice up the case or your menu with these fun flavors available in full wheels:

27994	PECORINO TOSCANO DOP STAGIONATO	2/2.5 KG*

MISE EN PLACE

Scharffen Berger Provisions

It started with a life-changing decision and a glass of rosé. In 1989 Dr. Robert Steinberg received a lymphoma diagnosis, and left his successful medical practice. He was inspired to pour his creative energy into something new—making fine chocolate. Robert traveled to Lyon and studied with French chocolatiers. He then partnered up with renowned sparkling winemaker John Scharffen Berger. Their goal was audacious. They wanted to pioneer the first American craft chocolate company. They'd do it by sourcing the world's finest cacao beans, crafting in small batches, using traditional methods on vintage machines.

Wanting to make a big splash, Robert and John hurried to hand-wrap their bars just in time for the annual Food & Wine Classic in Aspen. That event was the validation they needed. Jacques Pepin said the chocolate reminded him of his childhood in France. Julia Child told them it was the best American chocolate she'd ever tasted. Scharffen Berger soon became America's first "bean-to-bar" chocolate maker. Instead of drowning out the bean's true flavor with sugar and additives like the big brands, they let cacao's true flavors emerge.

Scharffen Berger Provisions are the newest and sweetest way to add decadence to your boards. With wine, cheese, and charcuterie pairing ideas on each box, it's a natural addition to boards large and small.

GUSTO E TRADIZIONE

Saucisson

Genoa, sopressata, felino...this is what tends to come to mind when we typically think of cured pork, an Italian style of sorts. But the French have their own twist on the ancient tradition of drying meats. Saucisson is a French style of dry curing that dates back to Roman times. Like many other aged French delicacies, and despite its subtle ingredients, this sausage packs a punch of savory umami. It can stand up to the funkier camembert, compliment a strong red wine or can be laid on top of a simple pizza to shine as the star! Check out our various domestic Saucisson offerings:
